still under construction was occupied by Hungarian soldiers, bout two thirds of them were red service color and about one third green service color, soldiers were repeatedly seen engaged in service of the piece drill in the barracks yard. Never were there more than two guns at one time whose caliber was estimated at 70 or 80 mm. Some officers apartment houses had been constructed on the road from the town to the installation about 500 meters north of the installation. This road was paved with squared stones as, according to construction workers, a tank unit was to occupy one section of the installation. ***

- In the sum er of 1951, a troop tent camp was northwest of Varosloed (P 48/D 58). Thile passing by twice, source noticed that a number of telephone lines led into the camp where soldiers were practicing.
- 5. During the period from 10 to 12 December 1951, the 1932 class was registered for the draft in the town hall of Pápa. The draftees received no individual induction orders but were informed collectively by posters.
- 7. Prior to October 1951, a Hungarian tank unit was quartered in the new barracks installation north of Tata Tóváros (P 48/X 94). The personnel of this unit wore blue service color including some with a small tank as branch-of-service insignia. Soldiers were repeatedly seen practicing at a training field between Tata Tóváros and Vertesszoelloes (Q 48/Y 94). No armored vehicles were seen there. An observation tower was in the center of the training field.
- 3. Prior to the fall of 1951, source repeatedly noticed a low building surrounded by a wire fence and guarded by soldiers with undetermined service color about h km. northeast of the Panhida (Q 48/Y 94) railroad station. This building was connected with the railroad station by a rather poor road. Local residents said that an armunition depot located deep in the rock was located there
